And, the same goes for mortgage loan, in case your loan provider charges more interest, it can be a costly affair in case you are unable to pay your money and end up losing your asset. Usually, there are two kinds of loan options i.e. Secured loan and unsecured loans. In the case of secured loans, one has to provide collateral against the amount.

In such conditions, one gets the benefit of availing lower interest rates and long and flexible loan repayment schedule. Such a loan also depends upon one's credit ratings and a poor credit history can mar one's loan prospects. On the other hand, unsecured loan does not require any collateral and does not require any security. As one is not providing security to the creditor, one has to face high interest rate.

The amount of cash that is provided in the unsecured loan format is much less in comparison to the secured loan provision and the payment time is also not flexible as in the case of secured loan. Usually, lack of collateral makes unsecured loan a tough decision for many loan takers, as no one is ready to pay huge interest rate for a small amount.
